Overdoses in schools a call to action

Experts discuss how educators can curb risks

David P. Ball
Metro | Vancouver

As New Westminster School District students continue to grapple with a tragedy that took the life of one of its 16-year-old students this week, and nearly killed another, experts have said their overdoses are a "call to action" for all schools.

Both teens overdosed on an "unknown" substance they wrongly believed was the party drug MDMA, local police said.

In Vancouver, several schools and teachers have been issued overdose reversal kits and training, Metro has learned. Several districts' substance use counsellors are raising awareness of fentanyl overdoses, and some teens even trained on overdose symptoms and first aid.

> Feeling connected is critical to avoiding problem substance use.
> Cindy Andrew

Increasingly, teenagers trying recreational drugs are witnessing first-hand the devastating impact of the ongoing public health emergency. But with most substance use happening off school grounds, what can educators do to combat the crisis?

"It is urgent," explained Art Steinmann, the Vancouver School Board's manager of substance use health promotion. "Of course, fentanyl is odourless, colourless and tasteless — one can't know if it's mixed into something. It's just so much more potentially impactful."

In the past, he said, when educators or school counsellors learned one of their students wanted to experiment with cocaine for instance, there was likely time to act and engage with the student constructively.

"Of course we were concerned," he said. "But we didn't expect that they would risk dying from a single exposure. Whereas today we really don't know."

Steinmann also manages the VSB's School Age Children and Youth (SACY) initiative, a partnership between the Board and Vancouver Coastal Health. It has seven "youth engagement" staff in secondary schools working directly with youth, plus four family support workers.

It also runs a teen engagement program that builds up older students' capacity to offer leadership and mentorship to students in Grades 7 to 9 — a proven effective strategy for adult-leery teens-at-risk.

But some changes are still needed in many schools on a policy and cultural level.

"If a kid comes to school high, it seems to be that's an opportunity for some conversation and involvement, not a punitive kind of response," said Cindy Andrew, Helping Schools Program consultant at the University of Victoria's Centre for Addictions Research of B.C. "That doesn't mean there aren't consequences, but chances are the kid … would benefit from some nurturing of relationships. Feeling connected is critical to avoiding problem substance use."

BIKE THEFT IN VANCOUVER

The number of reported bike thefts in Vancouver went down by 38 per cent in 2016, but thieves still manage to steal thousands of bikes every year. Metro asked Vancouver Police Department to compile a list of the top spots for bike theft. Granville Island as a whole nabs the top spot although Athletes Way in Olympic Village is the number one most reported location for bike thefts. Various points along the South False Creek Seawall make it onto the list as well as Chinatown.

1. 29 Olympic Village (0 Athletes Way)
2. 27 Granville Island (1600 Johnston St)
3. 24 Granville Island (1400 Anderson St)
4. 20 Burrard and Smithe (900 Burrard St)
5. 20 Science World (1400 Quebec St)
6. 18 Vancouver Technical Secondary (2600 E Broadway Ave)
7. 18 Pender in Chinatown (0 W Pender St)
8. 16 South False Creek Seawall (600 Stamps Land)
9. 16 Sunset Beach (1700 Beach Ave)
10. 13 Templeton Park (700 Templeton Dr)
11. 11 Vancouver Public Library (300 W Georgia St)
12. 11 Keefer in Chinatown (100 Keefer St)

CRISIS

Nearly five people die daily from opioids

Jen St. Denis
Metro | Vancouver

"It's so demoralizing," admitted Leslie McBain, whose son Jordan, 25, died of an illicit drug overdose three years ago. "And it's just getting worse."

British Columbia's illicit drug overdose epidemic reached new grim records Wednesday. Overdose deaths in April are the second highest ever recorded with 136 killed — nearly double April's deaths last year.

The numbers mean that nearly five British Columbians died from drug overdoses every day in April across the province.

"For all of us who work in advocacy for policy changes, for all the front-line workers and people doing evidence-based research to move things forward, this stops us in our tracks," said McBain, co-founder of Moms Stop the Harm and family engagement lead at St. Paul's Hospital's B.C. Centre on Substance Use. "We've been working so hard on this especially in the last year since B.C. declared an emergency. What's making this happen? It is the black market and the war on drugs."

B.C.'s hard drug market has become contaminated with the painkiller fentanyl, and its even-deadlier successors carfentanil and furanylfentanyl, which the B.C. Coroners Service said is the main reason behind the spike in deaths. This year, 488 people have died of overdoses, and if the trend continues could reach 1,464 by the end of year — a nearly 60 per cent increase from 2016.

Efforts to fight the epidemic haven't succeeded in bringing the numbers down. But chief coroner Lisa Lapointe said no deaths have occurred at Vancouver's two supervised injection sites, Insite and the Dr. Peter Centre, neither has anyone died at overdose prevention sites opened across B.C.

"I strongly urge those using illicit drugs to do so only at a safe consumption site or drug overdose prevention site, if one is accessible," said Lapointe. "If one of these sites is not accessible, please use only a small amount of the drug initially and only in the presence of someone willing and able to administer naloxone and call 911 if required. The risks associated with all illicit drugs in the province are extreme."

Un cri de cœur from parents of French students

EDUCATION

Families rally against school board over immersion cuts

David P. Ball
Metro | Vancouver

There's no détente yet between upset parents and the government-appointed Vancouver School Board over its decision last week to cut five of the district's roughly 20 kindergarten French-immersion classes next September.

On Wednesday evening, roughly 20 parents met with the board's government appointees who axed the classes without consulting them. Hundreds of them were on French-immersion wait lists already.

Affected families are issuing a cri de cœur to fight the cuts ahead of their next meeting with authorities, set for June 21.

In the meantime, they're writing letters to appointed trustee Dianne Turner and the district superintendent. And they're pushing the proposed Green-backed NDP government to either hold new VSB trustee elections or restore the previously elected trustees fired seven months ago over a budget dispute.

"The scope of these cuts is completely unprecedented," said Glyn Lewis, executive director of Canadian Parents for French. "It's shocking and outrageous.

"Now about 1,300 kids will be turned away from French immersion in Vancouver. For the Vancouver School Board to turn all these kids away is simply unacceptable; that's how parents are seeing this."

No one at the board was made available for an interview on Thursday. But a report from the district's director of instruction, Adrian Keough, was presented at Wednesday's meeting with parents defending the cuts.

Solutions for litter include better etiquette and signage

Wanyee Li
Metro | Vancouver

Surfrider Foundation volunteers collect garbage from Vancouver's Wreck Beach. COURTESY SURFRIDER FOUNDATION

"Don't litter" is a mantra many people are taught at a young age but several tons of garbage are still dumped on some of B.C.'s beaches, lakes and mountains every year.

Hundreds of volunteers and non-profit groups take it upon themselves to clean up the mess. Teams pick up three tonnes of trash from Cultus Lake alone every year. But preventing it in the first place will take education and community engagement, observers say.

B.C. recreation officer Alistair McCrone said people need to understand that garbage and food is not just an eyesore – it attracts bears and other wildlife and may force authorities to close trails and camping grounds to protect both people and animals, said.

The Ministry of Lands, Forests and Natural Resources has already had to close one trail near Pemberton after several bears charged visitors this year.

McCrone wants all students to learn camping etiquette and bear awareness before graduating.

"It would be helpful if it was mandatory in high school so everybody is learning about this before they leave school."

Some school districts in B.C. offer programs that focus on outdoor education like Vancouver's TREK program.

Aside from the dangers of attracting bears with garbage, trash left in parks and beaches also pollutes the surrounding ecosystem and kills wildlife. It's all around bad for B.C.'s reputation, says one non-profit group.

"We are trying to improve our coastline and maintain the economic value of our tourism and recreational industry," said Matthew Unger, director of development at the Vancouver chapter of Surfrider Foundation.

"You see birds eating cigarette butts, filing their stomachs with plastics and toxins."

Surfrider organizes shore clean-ups for various parks in the Vancouver area, like English Bay and Lynn Cannon.

Its next shore clean-up is scheduled for World Ocean's Day on Saturday June 10, at Habitat Island in Southeast False Creek.

It's a notoriously dirty area, said Unger.

"People can tuck away in there – there's lots of grass. You see tons of cigarette butts discarded. That tends to be a pretty bad area."

But community engagement can lead to a drastic reduction of garbage, said Surfrider Foundation's Vancouver chair, Yura Kulikov.

Volunteers comb through a 1,500 square metre area at every shore clean-up to create a dataset of garbage volume over time, he explained. In January 2015, crews found 1460 cigarette butts in an area that size at Wreck Beach.

The local community rallied after results of the 2015 clean-up became public to ensure their beach would perform better at the next clean up, explained Kulikov.

One year later, Surfrider only found 640 in the same spot. And a couple of months ago, they found 17.

That transformative change in the amount of litter at Wreck Beach shows what a little awareness can do, he said. He hopes the same thing can happen at other parks.

But for popular tourist destinations, better signage would quickly and effectively remind visitors to not litter, Unger said.

"If you walk down to the beach in Tofino and see all the signage about garbage, we can tell (Vancouver) is behind in that area. Education is a huge part of it and the city could definitely do a lot better doing some positive re-enforcement."

Tent city crowd stranded after sole low-barrier shelter closes

Jen St. Denis
Metro | Vancouver

Tana Copperthwaite once dreamed of having a garden.

Now, after a year of living in a low-barrier shelter run by Raincity Housing, Copperthwaite, 56, is staying in a tent in a city-owned lot off the Lougheed Highway in Maple Ridge.

"I would like to see them build some affordable housing," Copperthwaite said of her hopes for the future.

"Just regular housing where people could go and live. There's nothing here, and this town is so full of people who are haters of the homeless and people who are down and out."

After years of hard-fought community efforts against plans to build two provincially funded low barrier shelters in the community, residents of a tent encampment in Maple Ridge have literally nowhere else to go, said DJ Larkin, a lawyer with Pivot Legal.

A low-barrier shelter operated by Raincity Housing closed on May 31 after funding from BC Housing came to an end. Thirteen people who stayed up until that date have either found other shelter, or have chosen to camp outside, said Raincity in an email, while the organization continues to work with 38 former shelter residents to find permanent housing.

The city of Maple Ridge has gone to court to seek an injunction to remove the tent city, which it wants to turn into a city park. Pivot Legal has been speaking with tent city residents about the upcoming court case.

It's common for cities, like Vancouver, to go to court to seek injunction to remove large tent encampments, which have formed relatively frequently in recent years as protests to rising homelessness.

Metro did not receive a response to interview requests to the City of Maple Ridge or the mayor, Nicole Read.

But at a Feb. 27 press conference prior to Metro Vancouver's homeless count, Read — who recently received death threats that are now being investigated by police — expressed frustration with senior levels of government.

"We have no plan here in the province of British Columbia to address homelessness," Read said, "and local governments are scrambling to do their best with no resources, no funding to be able to deal with the citizens on their streets who need care and need attention and need places to live."

Tana Copperthwaite is a resident of a tent city set up near the intersection of St. Anne Avenue and 223 Street in Maple Ridge.

SCOHOL misspelling becomes a hot topic
Move over, "covfefe."

Donald Trump's infamous late-night typo may have been surpassed as misspelling of the year.

On Tuesday, the City of Revelstoke sparked lighthearted jokes across the province when its newly painted warning for motorists to slow down in front of a local school inadvertently misspelled the word "school."

"SCOHOL," the contractors wrote. It was, the city explained, the result of the two-letter stencil containing "H" and "O" being flipped upside down.

In fact, it turns out this isn't the first such mistake. In Florida last July, a road crew accidentally painted the word "SCOHOL" at a school crossing in Orlando. But they did it twice.

Aid coming for lumber industry

Natural Resources Minister Jim Carr is announcing $867 million in financial supports to help lumber producers and employees weather the impact of punishing new U.S. tariffs on Canadian softwood exports.

The package includes loans and loan guarantees to help cushion the blow for forestry companies and to help them exploring new markets and innovations.

The help includes $260 million to help diversify the market base for Canadian lumber products, allow the Indigenous forestry sector to explore new initiatives and extend work-sharing agreement limits to minimize layoffs.

The money also includes measures to support workers who want to upgrade their skills and transition to a different industry.

Cabinet discussed the options for a package last month, but the federal government wanted more input from the provinces via the special working group Carr established in February.

U.S. pulls out of Paris deal

ENVIRONMENT

Decision is a blow to global efforts to stem climate change

U.S. President Donald Trump has announced his intention to withdraw the United States from the historic Paris agreement on fighting climate change, dealing a blow to the international effort to address a problem he calls a hoax and isolating the U.S. from almost the entire world.

Trump added that he would attempt to negotiate a climate deal on different terms, though he did not say what kinds of changes would satisfy him.

The absence of the U.S. may make other countries, developed and developing, feel less compelled to meet their own commitments under the accord.

"In order to fulfil my solemn duty to protect America and its citizens, the United States will withdraw from the Paris climate accord, but begin negotiations to re-enter either the Paris accord or a really entirely new transaction on terms that are fair to the United States," Trump said in a speech in the White House Rose Garden on Thursday afternoon. "So we're getting out, but we will start to negotiate."

The withdrawal of the world's biggest economy and second-biggest emitter of carbon dioxide could have far-reaching consequences for the climate and for international affairs. Trump's decision, which triggered a global chorus of condemnation, increases the chances that the world will experience the most catastrophic consequences of sharply rising temperatures, such as deadly droughts and heat waves, severe coastal flooding and mass migration.

It was unclear what Trump would seek to renegotiate. The national emissions reduction targets central to the deal are voluntary; Trump, in other words, could essentially have negotiated with himself, making the U.S. target less ambitious while remaining in the agreement.

But he framed the deal as a kind of global conspiracy to take advantage of the U.S., imposing few burdens on other top polluters while hampering American firms with supposed restrictions he did not specify. He called it "very unfair, at the highest level, to the United States."

TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

DETAILS

The withdrawal makes the U.S. the third country to put themselves outside of the pact. The other two are Syria, which is embroiled in a civil war, and Nicaragua, which believes the deal was not stringent enough.

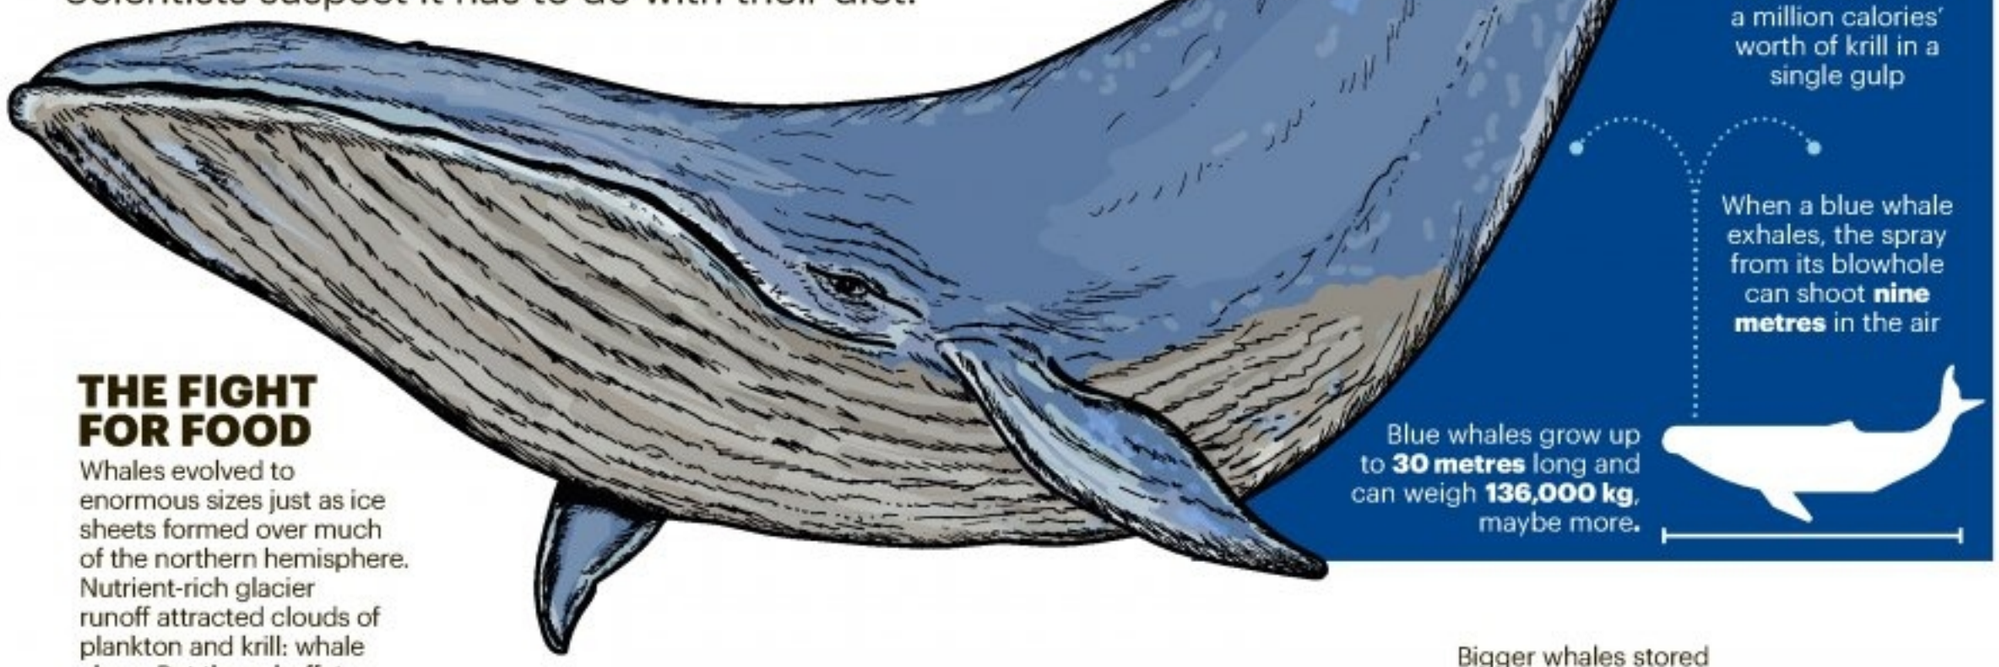
HOW WHALES GOT SO HUGE

They're the biggest animals to have ever lived on Earth, as far as we know. And a new study says baleen whales — the group of gargantuan filter-feeders that includes bowheads, fin whales, and the biggest of all, blue whales — all became enormous rather quickly, about 4.5 million years ago. Why? Scientists suspect it has to do with their diet.



BIG FACTS
Blue whales can engulf 110 tons of water and half a million calories' worth of krill in a single gulp
When a blue whale exhales, the spray from its blowhole can shoot nine metres in the air
Blue whales grow up to 30 metres long and can weigh 136,000 kg, maybe more.

THE FIGHT FOR FOOD

Whales evolved to enormous sizes just as ice sheets formed over much of the northern hemisphere. Nutrient-rich glacier runoff attracted clouds of plankton and krill: whale chow. But these buffets appeared at different times in different parts of the world, requiring whales to sojourn across the sea.

Smaller whales couldn't feed as much or travel as far; many went extinct.
Bigger whales stored more energy, ate more and could swim vast distances. They were more likely to survive and reproduce.

But the community rallied for change, erecting fences, flashing signs and under-highway turtle tunnels. Careful scientific monitoring has shown an 89 per cent reduction in turtle mortality.

Gal of wonder

Gadot discovers power in superhero's iconic costume

Despite wielding the golden lasso and deflecting bullets with her bracelets on the big screen for more than a year, Wonder Woman star Gal Gadot still doesn't see herself as a superhero.

"I'm not there yet," the 32-year-old actress said in a recent interview. "When I look on playback or I look at the monitor, it's not there yet. I know it's me. I understand everything, but I still don't get that I'm doing this iconic character ... It's crazy."

Gadot didn't grow up with Wonder Woman and wasn't a big superhero fan as a child. A former Miss Israel, she started her acting career there before making her American movie debut in 2009's Fast & Furious.

But she dug into stacks of comic books and the 1970s Wonder Woman TV show once she was cast as the Amazon princess, and quickly realized what an exceptional character she'd be playing.

"On the one hand, she owns something that is usually owned by men, which is the strength and the power" Gadot said. "But she brings the feminine qualities with her, which are love and warmth and compassion. And if you bond those two worlds together, then you get a very special, beautiful, whole character."

Director Patty Jenkins said Gadot embodies some of Wonder Woman's best attributes in real life.

"She has such inner strength, such an iron temperament, that she could work through anything and always keep an upbeat attitude," Jenkins said of the actress. "She's a pretty amazing person."

For Gadot, wearing Wonder Woman's classic red-and-blue costume helped her feel like a superhero — especially once the outfit was retooled after she made her debut as the character in last year's cinematic showdown between Batman and Superman.

"The first time I tried the costume was for Batman v Superman and it was tight and it was different," she said. "This time around we did a lot of adjustments because I had to wear it for six months, six days a week, every week so I had to feel really comfortable in it and be able to perform and move and fight."

The actress was empowered by an additional six months of pre-production training that included horseback riding, swordplay and dramatic fight choreography. And even if she can't quite see herself as Wonder Woman — a Lynda Carter for the next generation — wearing the costume brings her the closest.

"It always gives me a little bit of oomph, I would say," Gadot said with a superhero smile. "Like now I'm stronger." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Montreal tasting that goes beyond bagels

FOOD & DRINK

Renowned restaurateurs, plus local lunch delights

Renée S. Suen
travel@metronews.ca

Ask anyone for Montreal recommendations and I guarantee most will be food-related. The must-tries are endless: smoked meat, raw-milk cheeses, brewpubs or Montreal-style bagels.

I discovered the link between those flavours and the 120 cultural communities who settled along Boulevard St.-Laurent on Fitz & Follwell's Flavours of The Main walking tour. A trove of knowledge, guide Louis Trudel deciphers everything encountered on the route.

Long-time regular Morti Braustein, pictured with third-generation owner Sharon Wilensky, can remember when the Wilensky Special was only 17 cents, in 1952. RENÉE S. SUEN/FOR METRO

We focus on the north end, navigating through historical and significant landmarks, and taste examples of Montreal's rich immigrant heritage.

In Little Portugal, I learn the boulevard served as a physical divider between language, ethnicity and class as I bite through the flaky crust of Boulangerie Séraphin's pasteis de natas (Portuguese custard tarts).

The venison dish at L'Atelier de Joël Robuchon is a celebration of everything Québécois. RENÉE S. SUEN/FOR METRO

"English-speakers populated the west; French-speakers stayed in the east," explains Trudel, "and immigrant communities... was the bridge between them."

In old-world Mile End, we stop at Fairmount Bagel for a sesame bagel, and watch the staff churn out the iconic honey-water-boiled then wood-oven-baked numbers.

At the next stop, we belly up to the linoleum counter at Wilensky's Light Lunch. It's like we've stepped into 1932, save for the updated prices. I take a cue from the regulars and order the special: an all-beef bologna and salami sandwich. It's incredible. An umami bomb tucked within griddle-pressed cornmeal-dusted crusty golden layers of happiness.

On the other end of the budget and culinary spectrum, juxtaposing this backdrop of culture and history, there's Casino de Montreal's controversial new L'Atelier de Joël Robuchon.

Critics wag their fingers at the rumoured $11 million spent on bringing the world's most decorated chef here. The perception being that government assistance would better be spent nurturing the local scene.

The opening volley of house-made breads uses Québec-sourced wheat and cheeses. Buttery fist-sized sea scallops from the Magdalen Islands are simply seared and topped with ginger and chives. Free-range Cerf de Boileau venison is a marvel of supple rare flesh snuggled close to seared Marieville foie gras, and punctuated by tart Notre-Dame-de-Lourdes cranberries.

Montreal isn't just bagels and smoked meats, it boasts a sophisticated food scene. Here, an international headliner won't distract hungry diners from delicious local gems — Toqué!, Joe Beef and Au Pied de Cochon — or its luminaries — Normand Laprise, Martin Picard, David McMillan and Fred Morin. L'Atelier's ability to fit in confirms that Montreal's established scene can welcome a highly respected culinary brand, and hold its own.

Subban promises reaction from Preds

STANLEY CUP FINAL

Former Hab predicts win for Nashville in Game 3 vs. Pens

A good night's sleep has P.K. Subban more confident than ever about what the Nashville Predators will do on their own ice trailing the Pittsburgh Penguins 0-2 in the Stanley Cup Final. He delivered an All-Star guarantee for Saturday night.

"There's no question," Subban said Thursday. "We're going to win the next game, and then we'll move forward."

Subban came very close to guaranteeing a win in the moments after Pittsburgh's 4-1 win Wednesday night. The Penguins turned a 1-1 game into a rout by scoring three goals in the first 3:28 of the third period, forcing Nashville coach Peter Laviolette to pull star goaltender Pekka Rinne for rookie Juuse Saros.

On Thursday, the All-Star defenceman channeled Mark Messier, who backed up his own guarantee of a Rangers' win against New Jersey in the 1994 Eastern Conference finals. Subban explained why he was so confident, noting the Predators know they deserve to be playing for the Stanley Cup.

P.K. Subban backs his Predators to get back into the Stanley Cup final as the series shifts to Nashville for Game 3 on Saturday night. BRUCE BENNETT/GETTY IMAGES

"We're capable of playing even better than we did in Pittsburgh, and I thought we played some great hockey," Subban said. "I mean, out of 120 minutes, maybe we'd like to take back six of them. Ultimately, we have to be realistic with where we're at. We're down 2-nothing. We're coming back in our barn, and we don't lose here. So it starts Saturday."

Laviolette gave no hint about whether Rinne will start Game 3, saying only that he will not talk about lineup changes. The Predators coach says his goalies know who will start.

Rinne went into the final with the stingiest numbers in net this post-season and a favourite to win the Conn Smythe trophy as post-season MVP. The 34-year-old goalie has instead given up eight goals on 36 shots through two games.

Two goals went off teammates and into the net, but it has not been the inspiring performance that the Predators and their fans are used to from the big Finn.

Not-too-sweet Blueberry Lemon Corn Cake

Ceri Marsh & Laura Keogh
For Metro Canada

This not-too-sweet cake is sure to become a summer staple on your table. It's the perfect foil for fresh berries, whipped cream or even a scoop of ice cream.

Ready in 1 hour
Prep time: 15 minutes
Cook time: 45 minutes
Serves 8

Ingredients
- 2 cups spelt flour
- 1 cup corn meal
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 2 tsp baking powder
- 1/2 tsp baking soda
- 1/2 tsp salt
- pinch of allspice
- 1/2 cup coconut oil, melted
- 1 cup Greek-style yogurt
- 2 eggs
- 2 Tbsp maple syrup
- 1/4 cup lemon curd
- 2 tsp vanilla extract
- juice and zest of 1/2 a lemon
- 1 1/2 cups blueberries

Directions

1. Preheat oven to 350. Grease a 9-inch round springform pan with cooking spray.

2. In a large mixing bowl, whisk flour, corn meal, sugar, baking powder, soda, salt and allspice until combined.

3. In a separate bowl, mix coconut oil and yogurt. Whisk in the eggs one at a time and then stir in the maple syrup, lemon curd, extract, as well as lemon juice and zest; mix until smooth.

4. Add the wet ingredients to the dry and stir until just combined. Don't over mix. Fold in the blueberries.

5. Pour batter into prepared springform pan and bake in the oven for 40 to 45 minutes, or until toothpick inserted into the centre comes out clean. Remove cake form oven and allow to cool in the pan for about 10 minutes. Gently remove cake from pan and place on a wire rack to completely cool. Serve cake with additional berries and yogurt.

IT'S ALL IN THE STARS Your daily horoscope by Francis Drake

Aries March 21 - April 20
This is a challenging day at work. You feel it in the morning, and you feel it in the afternoon as well. Bummer. Yes, happy hour beckons strongly!

Taurus April 21 - May 21
Be patient with kids today, because there will be challenges. Likewise, this is a rocky day for romance. Patience is your best ally to help you keep a lid on things.

Gemini May 22 - June 21
Do your best to keep the peace at home and with family members today because someone will be cranky. This mood starts in the morning and continues into the afternoon. Not good.

Cancer June 22 - July 23
You might be short-tempered in the morning, which in turn makes dealings with someone older a bit strained. Someone might even criticize you. Hang in there.

Leo July 24 - Aug. 23
For some reason, this is not a happy money day for you. You might quarrel about finances or a possession in the morning. In the afternoon, you feel broke or squeezed. Good luck.

Virgo Aug. 24 - Sept. 23
Today the Moon is in your sign; however, you likely will be at odds with a parent or boss in the morning. Best to zip thy lip. In the afternoon, an older family member might be on your case. Oh well.

Libra Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
Avoid controversial subjects today, especially about politics, religion and racial issues. They will only create arguments and resentment. 'Nuff said

Scorpio Oct. 24 - Nov. 22
Be patient with a female friend or acquaintance today so to avoid an argument. Do not fall into worry mode or critical thinking this afternoon.

Sagittarius Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
A squabble with someone in a position of authority might occur this morning. Don't let this get you down in the afternoon. It's important for Sagittarians to be optimistic.

Capricorn Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
Steer clear of controversial subjects today. Likewise, don't argue about travel plans. Nevertheless, criticism from others might be a downer.

Aquarius Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
Avoid arguments about inheritances and shared property today, because they will simply be a waste of time. Postpone decisions for tomorrow, which is a great day!

Pisces
Feb. 20 - March 20
Be accommodating with others today, because the Moon is opposite your sign. Avoid family arguments in the morning. Avoid discussions with bosses in the afternoon. (Yikes!)
